Awww, nuts -- coming in at No. 14 means we lost out to Amy Grant, a brunch with Santa, the Saddle Tramps Torch Light Processional, a Christmas disco, and all sorts of kindness at Seton Hall.

stolafcollege Last year St. Olaf College's @FlatenArtMuseum accepted a rare collection of nearly 150 German propaganda posters and public notices from World War II. The collection is distinctive among collections of Nazi posters in that it comprises posters created for distribution throughout Nazi-occupied Europe rather than within Nazi Germany. While most of the posters were designed for use in France, some were created for distribution in Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Soviet Union.

The posters were gathered in the months following D-Day (June 6, 1944) by Maj. Duncan Emrich, historian for Allied Supreme Commander Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. The posters vary greatly in size and range in condition from very poor to fair.

The collection holds interest for both research and teaching, but the posters first need to be conserved, stabilized, and digitized. To aid the museum's efforts in eventually stabilizing the collection, the museum and a small group of students are working right now with the Midwest Art Conservation Center to assess the collection. Farewell, seniors -- we'll keep the Adirondacks dry for when you come back to visit (unless you show up during winter, when they'll be in storage ... but still dry).

And there we are at No. 25 -- right between Stanford and Harvard (which happens to be where we sit geographically, too; more than coincidence?).

stolafcollege The Dallas Cowboys football team opened their training camp at St. Olaf this week in 1961. The photo shows them playing on Manitou Field below Thorson Hall. "In my 12 years in the league I'd have to say that St. Olaf gave us the best camp I've ever been to in terms of food, practice fields, and housing," said Head Coach Tom Landry. #tbt
